

Social Care Assessments

- What Happens Next

This factsheet sets out more information about what should happen after your Care Act assessment.

This factsheet does not contain information about the assessment process itself, but for more information on this please contact the Learning Disability Helpline for advice or, if you are a member of the Legal Network, arrange to speak to a caseworker.

After the assessment

After a needs assessment, your local authority must review the information gathered and decide whether or not to provide services for you.

Your authority will do this by determining whether your needs meet the national eligibility criteria.

The eligibility threshold is different for adults with care needs and for carers. Both sets of criteria are set out in the Care and Support (Eligibility Criteria) Regulations 2014.

If your local authority determines that you do have eligible needs for support, then you should be involved in the care planning process in order for you to make important decisions about the type of support that you would like to receive.

If your local authority decides that you do not have eligible needs for care and support, you should be notified of this in writing and reasons should be provided. You should also receive written information on prevention which should suggest ways that you can stop your needs deteriorating, or suggest other organisations in your local area that you can approach for support.

I haven't heard from my social worker – what should I do?

If you have had an assessment of your care and support needs but you have not heard from the social services department of your local authority, you should contact them and ask:

- Whether they have made a decision about your eligibility for care and support.
- What that decision is.
- When you should expect to receive written confirmation from them of this decision.
- You are also entitled to a copy of your assessment so you should ask for this as well.

If you are unhappy with the response that you receive, for example, because you feel that there are unnecessary delays in the decision making process or you disagree with the decision, then do get back in touch with the Learning Disability Helpline for more advice (phone 0808 808 1111) or, if you are a member of the Legal Network, arrange to speak to a caseworker.

We hope that you have found this factsheet useful. Whilst you are here, we have a small favour to ask. More people are using our service than ever before. We can't keep up with demand. We don't want to turn people away, and we want to keep on developing more information resources like this factsheet, but we don't have enough money to expand. So you can see why we need to ask for your help. We know that our information and advice can make a real difference to the quality of life of the people we support. If people using our service could help to support us, our future would be much more secure. Click here to make a small donation: www.donate.mencap.org.uk/phone
